FOR THE PRICE OF A VAUXHALL CARLTON, YOU CAN HAVE A VOLVO 740 AND THE CANNES CARLTON.

Anyone with £15,000 to spend on a car can have a £14,999 Vauxhall Carlton 2.0i GL.

The £1 left over would pay for a couple of hours on a parking meter.

Alternatively, you could buy a £14,695 Volvo 740 GL.

The £305 left over would pay for a night for you and your wife in the best hotel in Cannes (£280 including sea view). Plus £25 to tip the bell-boy.

Cruising effortlessly down the Autoroute du Soleil, you'd appreciate the quiet of the car's 2-litre fuel-injected engine.

And on the entire 751-mile journey, you'd only have to fill up the tank once (with unleaded, of course).

As you pulled up outside the hotel, the commissionaire would greet you with the recognition reserved for those who drive a large, prestige saloon car.

You'd step out of the car feeling remarkably fresh and relaxed after such a long drive.

And once in your room, you'd lie back with your freshly-squeezed citron presse, reflecting on the great mysteries of life. Such as whether that Vauxhall driver's found his meter yet.
